

Devising a Method for Sharing Meat Pie

April 13th, 2005

An imaginative game of making meatpie takes a turn for the cognitive when Jason is challenged with the problem of how to share the pie evenly among those at the table. Marija provides marker and paper as the means for making his thinking visible. Jason's sister Renae pays close attention to the process. A number of attempts and some discussion in between result in an answer he finds satisfactory. He has constructed for himself the concept of fractions.